Gardening in Containers

The popularity of container gardening continues to increase steadily year after year. If you don't have the space for a vegetable garden, or if your outdoor space isn't suitable for a garden you've always wanted, consider the possibility of container gardening. Patios, decks, porches or doorsteps can provide enough space for an attractive and productive display.

While space is an obvious reason to try container gardening, it is not the only reason people choose this method of gardening. Often, convenience plays a big part, especially for herbs and vegetables. Having these types of plants close by is a tremendous advantage. The mobility of the container makes it easy to rearrange and to add new interest and color to your landscape.

Containers are easy to maintain and offer endless possibilities. Want instant gratification? Feeney's offers pre-designed and established ready to go containers. Want to customize a container yourself? With the help of one of our garden experts explore the endless color combinations and textures yourself. Choose from hundreds of containers and thousands of plants. Let us help you design the container garden that is perfect for your outdoor living needs.

Ask The Expert

Determinate or Indeterminate?

What's the difference between determinate and indeterminate tomatoes? Determinate tomatoes are smaller and much more compact plants than their indeterminate counterparts. Determinate tomatoes produce fruit earlier and all at once. While indeterminate varieties produce fruit from summer until frost. Lastly, determinate tomatoes are great for container gardening. While indeterminate varieties may do okay in containers, they are probably best suited planted in the garden because of their large and sprawling habit. Examples of determinate varieties include, but are not limited to; Better Bush, Celebrity and Rutgers while some popular indeterminate varieties include; Sweet 100, Jet Star, and Better Boy.

Attracting Hummingbirds to your Garden

Creating a hummingbird habitat is fun, easy, and rewarding. One good way to enjoy the company of hummingbirds is to plant nectar rich flowers that these flying jewels just can't resist. Some of their favorites include: Salvia, Petunias, Foxglove, Honeysuckle, Morning Glory, and Agastache. One of our personal favorites is Salvia guaranitica; Salvia 'Black and Blue'.

Nectar feeders are another common way to attract hummingbirds to your garden. Remember to clean your feeders often. Feeders should be emptied and filled with fresh solution twice a week in hot weather, and once a week in Spring and Fall. Another great tip is to mist them. Hummingbirds can't resist a mist of water. They will often perch in spray or fly through moving water to cool off and bathe.

Spartina

Thanks to Spartina the essence of summer has arrived. Their new line of purses and accessories in blue and cream pairs beautifully with denim and white, summers most popular colors. Their "Jersey Shore" collection continues to make us all Jersey proud! Match any of these with their summer jewelry collection of tortoise shell, alabaster and pearl, along with their new colorful jute friendship bracelets and you are as good as smelling the sweet smell of summer and feeling the ocean breeze on your face!

What's Wrong With My Tomatoes?

The number one tomato growing question that is asked, why do the bottom of my tomatoes turn black and soft? What is being described is blossom end rot, the result of a calcium deficiency. There is no saving these rotted fruits, so remove the affected fruit. In order to prevent this problem in the future, make sure the plants are getting at least an inch of water per week. For a more immediate solution to the problem try Rot Stop by Bonide. Rot Stop provides calcium in a liquid form that is readily available to the tomato plant. This provides a quick fix for the Blossom End Rot problem and lets you enjoy the fruits of your labor.
